Intro to college essays

Personal Statements- this essay will be used for all schools they apply to. We recommend working on essay in July or Aug before Fall. That way students can work on School Supplemental essays after the summer. Supplemental essay prompt examples: Why this college- why this major, activities description
Most schools release their supplemental essay prompts on Aug 1st

Stronger essays can improve your chance of admissions by 5x among those with a similar academic profile.

Prompt helps students find what is unique and important to them

The goal of the application?

To prove you will be successful in college and beyond
You will graduate and do well in your classes
You will contribute positively to the schools' community
You will have a positive impact or whatever you choose to do in the future
The college will help you achieve your goals or put you on a path to achieving them

5 Traits colleges look for in their applicants

Drive- Pushing yourself to succeed no matter how long the odds, going through difficult situations and coming out a better person
Intellectual curiosity- Learning just for the fun of it to gain a deeper understanding of subjects/topics which they are interested
Initiative- not willing to accept the status quo, entrepreneurial, always thinking of ways to improve
Contribution- making their community, school, organizations or peers better as a result of their involvement or actions
Diversity of experiences- Different life experiences and ways of thinking about the world, adding unique perspectives to the student body

3 common Myths- re essay process

The well-rounded students- being good at everything helps but colleges are really looking for people who excel in one or a few things- focus on these "spikes"

Needing to tell their life story- focus on something else- intellectual curiosity or initiative not your whole life story

Creative and thought provoking- An essay does not need to be overly creative or use metaphors, large words or be thought provoking. It just needs to cover the content in a clear way. Admissions officers need to understand who the student is within 1-2 minutes

Strong Essays combine what you have done with how you write about it.

What you have done should be explored while there's still time to gain experiences- therefore students should start process in the spring of Junior year

Keep in Mind:

College essays are not hard- they don't need to be perfect, creative or philosophical. Focus on showcasing your experiences in a clear way – prove you will be successful in college and beyond.

Getting feedback is critical. But be smart about who you get it from.

Writing a compelling Common App essay should take 6-8 hours of a student time over 2 weeks, get it done in June or July, then focus on your supplements.
